“Jesuit values have taught me to approach my current role with a service mindset. As I look at building my career in the future, I consider how larger roles can allow me to impact more lives and help more people. These ideals have also taught me a lot about being in community with others, not just blindly serving those in need.”

“One of my earliest formative experiences [at Holy Cross] was a first-year Community-Based Learning course, where I volunteered with Girls Inc. That experience set the tone for my time at Holy Cross; I pursued internships with Dismas House, where I learned about reentry after incarceration, and Community Harvest Project, where I engaged in efforts to address hunger through community organizing. These opportunities helped me connect classroom concepts to real-world impact and fueled my passion for social change.”

Holy Cross students are making their dreams a reality — but that's not as simple as it seems. The success of our students is backed by meaningful conversations and support from professors, career development professionals, coaches and even friends. That community sticks around long after graduation, becoming a powerful network for one another while also connecting with the next generation of students to share career wisdom, provide connections to organizations for internships and, help Holy Cross candidates stand out in the crowd of job applicants.

“The rigorous coursework at Holy Cross allowed me to build a strong foundation in both STEM and philosophy. Outside the classroom, my undergraduate experience was deeply enriched by my involvement in SPUD, the PAL program, club lacrosse, and various faith-based opportunities. Additionally, Dr. Muccino’s course, “How Medical Clinicians Reason,” in the academic internship program significantly shaped my path. These experiences affirmed my call to be a physician.”

“Just a few months after graduation, as I reflected on my four years at Holy Cross, I admitted to myself that my true calling might lie in the realm of divinity studies. When I called my mentor and professor Bianca Sculimbrene to tell her about these thoughts, her immediate reaction was to cheer! She was so enthusiastic at the prospect of me going after a dream I truly desired, and couldn’t have been more supportive. I wouldn’t have had this realization without the amount of formation I experienced through interactive volunteer and activity opportunities and classes, professors and mentors that shaped my worldview as much as they taught me academically.”
