Description:

This course introduces the literature of the first half of the seventeenth century in England, from James I’s accession in 1603 to the publication of Paradise Lost in 1667. We will be reading poetry, prose, and drama from across this volatile period, which saw the Stuart monarchs toppled by civil wars and the English Church split apart. When subjects can justify beheading a king, what constitutes right rule – not only for the country, but for church, city, family, and self? In an individual, passions were said to be like unruly subjects, and reason like a monarch. So how should heart and mind relate in a moral life? Varied answers to this question shaped varied roles for literature, whose pleasures appealed to both sides of a person.

Goals:

- To read and enjoy some of the major writers and genres of the later English Renaissance
- To understand how changing conceptions of self, family, and state influenced each other and shaped our modern perspectives
- To investigate how texts interacted with their cultural contexts
- To consider what qualities give a text literary value
- To hone close reading skills by learning to ask and answer interesting questions

a number of shorter readings available on Moodle

Expectations:

Class participation, reading responses, and quizzes (10%): this is a discussion-based course. Plan to read all material closely and be ready to participate actively and thoughtfully in class discussion. More than three absences will lower your final grade. If you must miss a class, it is your responsibility to borrow the notes from another student, acquire any materials that were handed out, and learn if changes have been made to the syllabus.

To help you think critically about our readings, for many sessions I will assign questions or ask you to write on questions of your own. Sometimes I will collect the responses, sometimes not. Since the writing in these short exercises is informal and exploratory, collected reading responses will receive general marks (✓, ✓-, or ✓+) based on how thorough and thoughtful they are. For legibility’s sake, I ask that reading responses be typed. Reading responses must be on time to receive credit.

Quizzes will be given as needed to ensure that everyone is keeping up. There will be no make-up quizzes.

Presentation (10%): each member of the class will offer a 10-minute oral report on a broader critical, historical, or textual context for one of our readings. You may choose from among the topics I will provide or propose a topic of your own for my approval.

Papers (45%): one 5–7pp paper (15%) and one 8–10pp paper (30%), each due at the beginning of class on the dates specified in the Schedule. We will discuss specific requirements for each paper in advance. For the second paper, which we will workshop in class, grades will be based on completion of first drafts, thoughtfulness of peer reviews, and quality of revision work as well as final drafts.

I am delighted to meet with you to discuss your papers as you develop them. I find that email is not an effective medium for substantive discussion, so I ask that you come to talk with me in person, either in office hours or by other arrangement. To ensure that I can be helpful to you, please come in well before a paper is due. I will gladly sit down with you anytime up until two days before a final due date. Please plan your drafting schedule with this timetable in mind.

If you foresee needing an extension on a final draft, please talk to me well in advance. No extension of deadlines will be granted without prior permission or a dean’s letter. Late papers will be accepted only at my discretion. If I accept one, it will drop 1/3 of a grade for each class period or part of a class period it is overdue. For example, if a paper is due at the beginning of class on Tuesday, an A- essay submitted after Tuesday 12:30 and before Thursday 12:30 will receive a B+. I will not accept papers more than two class periods late.

Papers must be printed in a conventional twelve-point text font (like Times) and double-spaced, with one-inch margins on all sides. In the upper left corner of the first page, list your name, my name, the course number, and the date on separate lines. At the center of the next line, please provide a title designed to prepare your reader for your argument.
Remember to proofread carefully for spelling and mechanical errors before you print. I will not read papers whose pages are not numbered and stapled.

Midterm exam (15%): there will be an in-class exam on the date specified in the Schedule.

Final exam (20%): a cumulative final exam will be given during exam period.

Academic Honesty: Your work must be your own and must be prepared exclusively for this class. Whenever you make use of language or ideas from outside sources (including web sites, books, other classes, roommates, etc.), you must acknowledge the sources in formal citations, formatted according to MLA guidelines. You’ll find an overview of MLA format in A Pocket Style Manual. For issues the overview doesn’t address, consult the *MLA

Failure to acknowledge sources constitutes plagiarism, a serious violation of academic honesty. Other violations include cheating and collusion. Just as you need to be able to trust that I will evaluate your work fairly, I must be able to trust that the work you present as your own is, in fact, your own. Therefore any violation of academic honesty will incur a zero on the assignment and academic probation, suspension, or dismissal from the College, as determined by the college-wide academic honesty policy described on pages 17–19 of the College Catalog (http://www.holycross.edu/catalog/).

The process of learning which sources need to be cited and how takes time. I am always happy to field questions about acknowledging sources before you submit an assignment.
Afterwards is too late. Always err on the side of giving credit where credit may be due.
